Please explain why this model won – what made it stand out from the rest?

The two children were initially separate and being put together caused an argument. The children settled down and during the design phase they began to communicate although each had strong opinions on how to proceed. As time progressed I observed a huge improvement in collaboration, communication and teamwork. Each child focused on a component, and then worked together to complete the task.

The construction was strong and stable, and showed imagination in the vertical mechanism.

During the presentation each child spoke and both were very proud of their achievement, even giving their crane a name.
